PSS: 9 TEACHING OF SCIENCE-I (FOR PHYSICAL SCIENCE GROUP)

UNIT I: Introduction

- Nature of science, its role and importance in daily life, Objectives of teaching science.
- Science education in India.
- Planning the instruction: Identification of teaching points, organizing the content, designing learning experiences.

- Role and functions of instructional materials and teaching aids: Components of instructional materials, multimedia, computer, chart, models, improvised apparatus.
- Preparation of unit and lesson plan.

UNIT II: Methods of Teaching :

- Lecture method, discussion method, demonstration method, activity based teaching, inductive and deductive approaches, Heuristic method, inquiry approach, problem solving method, project method programmed instruction.

UNIT III:

- Evaluation in Science Teaching : Oral observation and written, objectives and essay type questions, type, fill-in-blank type, true-false, matching type, construction of test items, achievement test, diagnostic test and their constructivist approach. Summative and formative, Continuous and comprehensive Evaluation (CCE).

UNIT IV: School Science Curriculum

- History of development of Science Curriculum
- From subject – centered to behaviorist to constructivist approach of curriculum development.
- Recommendations of NCFs on Science curriculum.
- Designing science curriculum for Primary and secondary level
- Role of science lab, text book, library, Exhibition in teaching science

UNIT V: Professional Development of Science/ Physics/ Chemistry Teacher

- Professional Development – Teaching as a profession, need for pre-service and inservice professional development programme.
- Various opportunities for in-service professional development, interaction with peer teachers, reading, attending training programme, membership of professional Organisation, sharing through conferences, seminars and journals, travel, cultivating science hobbies, mentoring, teacher : exchange with universities and all other school etc.
- Teacher as a researcher – learning to understand, how students learn science.
- Action Research – Meaning, selecting problems for action research, developing various format for action research, area of action research.

COURSE EPC 2: DRAMA AND ART IN EDUCATION (1/2)

Creative Drama: Focus Areas

- In drama exploration, the overall context presented to students is to understand life and to learn from life. The mode is experiential. The exercises are structured by the teacher, but the experience and its outcome is generated by participants in the process. The experience and reflection on that, is the learning. However for this to happen it is mandatory that the exercises are planned and structured by the teacher and not offered as "open improvisations".

- Encourage recognition of differences among people: caste, class, gender, religion, age, community, occupation, lifestyle, etc. and how these influence actions, decisions, and relationships of people. Learn to place oneself in a wider arena of these cross cutting currents. The self to be placed in the context of the other. "How should I look at the other? What does that reveal about me?" Go beyond the immediate and look at other groups and settings, e.g. rural, the disadvantaged and other cultural communities.
- Ways of seeing situations, social structures and communities. To sharpen observation and to learn to continuously ask probing questions while investigating situations. Develop the capacity to look at same situation from different perspectives. Learning to recognize contradictions within situations with the aim of grasping a better understanding of the situation rather than wanting to look for solutions.
- Finding connections between the particular and the universal. How larger processes and contexts play out in the specific context of daily life situations and vice versa. For instance, the case of a marginalized Dalit woman seeking medical help is connected with the larger worlds of state responsibility and public health policy, prevailing gender relations, the judiciary, etc.
- Change as a principle of life. Identifying it within drama work; the repercussions of change, who does it affect, why and how?
- Learning to continuously reflect on and analyse classroom exploration and their connection with events and situations in world outside. Evaluating one's own and group's progress in class.

Fine Arts: Focus Areas

- Art, Art appreciation and Art education: visit to places like crafts museums, bai-bhavan, art galleries. Organise art, craft and music exercises with small groups followed by discussions and presentation. Any local exhibition or art event can be used as precursor for the session. The session should involve using some art for a while followed by a reflection on the experience and then connect it to their own school days and art.
- Visual Art: Opportunities to experiment and create pieces of art using different medium. Focus on colours, textures, composition and thematic content. Using a range of medium: paper and water colors, paper and crayon, color pencils, acrylic, oil paint and canvass, student-teachers would learn about lines, forms, compositions, colors, space divisions etc. Specific tasks would include free drawing, developing narratives in visuals, composition of an imagined situation, telling a story through comic strips, creating a collage using images, bits cut out from old magazines, news-paper etc.

- Music: Orientation to different forms of music with either a film screening or lecture demonstration by an artist to show a wide range of musical forms and a brief history of one or two forms; connecting to music in nature and within our own selves; voice training: opening the voice, music and rhythm exercises; singing, creating music with different objects, practicing basic notes and tones; experimenting with one new forms; folk of any one region; collating music/songs from a community/within the family for special occasions or themes. (e.g. lullabies from different language cultures, harvest songs, songs during the freedom struggle etc.; create musical pieces with others; design and run sessions on music with children.
- Cinema and Electronic Media: Provide exposure to alternative cinema, develop appreciation for cinema as an art and understand the impact of the electronic media, its impact on our psyche and aesthetics; orientation with an expert on films providing a background followed by screening of known films; projects/discussion on television and our mindscape: storylines, the corruption of aesthetics, intervention in familial spaces, increasing legitimization of violence; age appropriate viewing and selection of films.
- Literary Arts: linkage between language, literature and performing arts; appreciation of poetry as performance art, play reading and reading literature as an art, selection of poetic pieces and developing performances around it; exposure to readings in different language traditions: Hindi, English other regional languages and dialects drawing upon local traditions.
- Architecture and spatial Design: develop a deeper understanding of architectural heritage, appreciation of spatial designs and the aesthetics therein: colonial, Mughal, Sultanate period, Post-Independence etc. Through heritage walks; political dynamics of space and its changing trends; cultural social connections with architecture and town/city planning; connection to natural resources and access to these viz a viz architecture and design; spaces for children in a city.
- Designing a Project for School Children: Participants to identify a specific age group of children and a relevant theme and design an art based project for them which should span over a period of time example – a heritage walk to a nearby monument and a public event about it – including art exhibition, plays, songs and other similar expressions; principles of inclusion, diversity, child-centered approaches would be given and the participants would be encouraged to use all that they have learnt in an interactive manner; feedback from students, teachers and community would be used for evaluation of this aspect.
